

Laurice Ereifej

Regional Freshwater Practice Lead

"I'm among the dinosaurs ;-)) and I worked for WWF in different positions.

I started the present position as regional Freshwater Lead in 2012. To save our river ecosystems for nature and people. I would like to see a future, where people understand that healthy nature is a basic condition for their own life and wellbeing, thus we develop real sustainable solutions for land and water resource management. Such a vision inspires me to fight for it and mobilize various resources and people to achieve this goal.

Originally I am a biologist, and my favourite animal groups are amphibian. This is not a usual interest of women, I know ;-))."

together possible.